7/19

PETAL #2

+ Purpose
+ Specific

Noel Tarsad

Amy Tan [describes her identity] and how the English she grew up with affected her linguistic viewpoint in her narrative, "Mother Tongue." She describes how the language she used in "a talk to a large group of people," and the language she uses with her mother differs, effectively becoming "different Englishes." Specifically, Amy Tan uses juxtaposition to create an explicit visible difference between the way she speaks depending on the audience, and how that impacts perception. Tan talks about her mother's English being "broken" or "limited," and how that isn't accurate to her comprehension. Amy Tan's mother is able to read Forbes, Wall Street, has stocks, and yet still is taken unseriously from people she talks to. Tan uses this contrast to describe how language affects understanding and interpretation. The juxtaposition between her "Englishes" helps her improve as a writer by writing for her mother to read. In conclusion, Amy Tan creates a contrast between perspective and eloquence

Use Time Term Correctly.

to describe her family's experience and cultural influence.

You've got the A form, Noel —
but when discussing words,
JUXTA is not the tool you want.

— Kott